DEATH CAME AT LAST

The Czar of All the Russias Passes Peacefully Away.

NOW LYING LIFELESS AT LIVADIA.

He Breathed His Last in the Arms of His Wife Whom He Loved So Weli.

SURROUNDED BY HIS FAMILY.

Since Tuesday His Majesty Has Composedly Walted For the End Attending to Necessary State and Family Affairs in the Short Intervals of Consciousness and Freedom From Pain-All That Science and Skill Could Do, All the Ald That Wealth Could Git; Could Not Slay the Inevitable Hand of Death-The Grand Duke Nicholas, His Eldest Son, Now Rules the Russias-A Brief History of the Reign of the Dead Monarch Whose Life Was Filled With Dauger and Dread From the Nilllists.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 2.—The angel of death, in the shadow of whose pinions the antocrat of all the Russias has been lying for many days, yesterday beckoned and the soul of the man who had in his hands the lives and destinies of millions upen millions of men was borne away. Calmly and peacefully as a sleeping babe, he, who by his slightest word could have plunged Europe into a war, the horrors of which would defy description, fell into the dreamless sleep, which he feared not. He, though the head of the church whose members number over 70,000,000 persons, took his last rites a few days before death claimed him from all his greatness.

THE DEAD MAN'S LAST PICTURE.

At 2:15 o'clock in the afternoon the summons came, and a few hours later the thunderous booming of cannon at Livadia and St. Petersburg announced that the ezar was dead, and that he who had been the Grand Duke Nicholas reigned in his stead. On lightning wings the news of Russia's loss spread throughout the world, and it is safe to say that everywhere the intelligence created sympathy for the family of him who, by his policy, had maintained the peace of Europe.

Since Tuesday, when the doctors in formed the czar that there was no longer room for hope, his majesty composedly waited for the end, attending to necessary state and family affairs in the short intervals of consciousness and freedom from pain. These were necessarily brief, the doctors having had recourse to sedatives to procure sleep and allay pain. On Wednesday the ezar was still able to be taken to a window of the palace whence he gazed out upon the country he loved. The night passed with all the aggravating symptoms and dry eough. Dr. Zacharin remained in attendance upon him throughout the night, only snatching brief intervals for sleep in the antercom.

The morning broke with rain and wind and heavy clouds and the weather much colder. As the day advanced the weakness increased so rapidly that the czar himself, still eonseions, recognized that he could live only a few hours. He expressed a desire to reeeive the sacrament, which was administered to him by Court Chaplain Yanisheff and Father Ivan, in the presence of the whole family. The czar then conversed long and earnestly with Father Ivan, eoneluding by asking his family to again gather round him. He spoke to each member separately and at the greatest length with the ezarina. He blessed all his children present.

The seene was one of deep pathos, all being in tears. All this time his majesty was sitting up in an armehair. After taking leave of his family he grew gradually weaker, and his voice became so indistinct that it was scarcely andible. About noon a convulsive fit of conghing was fellowed by a slight rally. Thence until the end the czar temained quiet, seemingly free from pain. At 2:15 o'elock he heaved a deep sigh and breathed his last in the arms of the empress, who then breke down with the weight of her grief. The docters fear the results of reaction upon her already exhausted system.

When all was over the czarewitch, Grand Duchess Xenia and the other imperial relatives approached the bedslde in turn to take a last farewell. The court officials and members of his majesty's suite were nfterward admitted. The flag over the palace was placed at halfmast and a salute was fired by the vessels in the port.

Shortly after 4 o'elock the members of the yalaee gnard were marshalled in the square in front of the palaee chapel for the ceremony for swearing allegiance to the new czar. They were the first to take the eath. The grand dukes were the next to swear alleglance, and they were fellowed in the order of precedence by the high court functionaries, court officials, military officers and eivil of-

The body has been embalmed. It will probably be laid for a couple of days in the palace chapel. The arrangements that will be made for the funeral are still unknown. It is believed that the remains will be embarked on the imperial yacht Polnarari Fivezda (Polar Star) at Yalta, where the Seventh arm.y corps will render military honors. The whole Black sea fleet will e-eort the yacht to Odessa, whence the body will be conveyed by railway to St. Petersen route to enable the troops to render honors to the dead. The state mourning will commence on Saturday. The funeral will probably be held two weeks

Among the peasants of Russia he will be mourned with a deep and abiding sorrow, for was he not the "peasant czar?" None of the grandiloquent titles borne by hlm was thought as much of as the one bestowed upon him by his lowly subjects, whose virtues were magnified in him, and whose

And there will be sincere mourning, too, in the royal and imperial families of Enrope—not the conventional mourning prescribed by rule, but the mourning of little children. For who has not heard of the annual visits of the ezar to Copenhagen, the home of his beloved czarina, when, with the children of emperors, kings and princes around him, he was the biggest child of them all, joining in all their sports and romping

LIFE STORY OF ALEXANDER III. Part the Dead Mouarch Has Played in His Short Reign.

Alexander Ill, czar of all the Russias, was the second son of Alexander H. und was born March 10, 1845. He was the 17th of his house. He married Nov. 9, 1866, Marie Dagmar, daughter of Christian 1X, Klug of Denmark. He was, therefore, a brother-in-law of the Prince of Wales, who married the Princess Marie's elder sister Alexandra, and also of George I, King Chirthan's second son, who was elected klug of the Hellenes In 1863, Alexander Ill became czar of all the Russias March 3, 1881, when his father, Alexander II, was ussassinated by the idhillsts. He was crowned at Moscow, May 27, 1883.

Alexander was educated in the universi ties of his own country, but he was never distinguished for his mental gifts. In early lite one of his chief characteristics was timidity, and it was written of him recently, by a visitor to Russla, that throughout his life he had continued cantlous and indisposed to changes-especially to changes in accordance with westeru views.

The dead emperor has played a most active part in the history of ids own emplre, and, indeed, in that of Europe, since on March 13, 1881, he succeeded to the throne. His principal endeavors have been directed to the stamping out of nihilism. He has worked unceasingly to develop the military power of Russia, and to organize her Asiatle and Caucaslan provinces, not forgetting to keep a careful watch on Constantinople and the Balkan penlusuka; he has withdrawn his country from close relations with Germany, and made it the scave ally of France, but over and above everything has the suppression of ullillsm been his ulm. Indeed, he ascended the thrope with a well-founded dread of this amerchistic society, and its much nations them the accident could not have hapagainst him have made lds reign a most undiappy one.

The relgn of Alexander III has been a period of sharp reaction. In later years a Conservative, as the son of a Liberal father often is, and are absolutist, as every Romanoff is, Alexander III has been driven, by the marder of less father and the nihilist attempts against himself, to believe that his thrope was in danger, that revolution burg, stopping at the important towns was in the air, that every laberal was als persistent foe, and that the only safe policy, either for Russia or himself, consisted in stamping out all germs of liberalism.

At the time of the assassination of Alexunder 11 he held the most Important military position in the empire, tue communud of all the troops in the department of the capital, succeeding therein his nucle, ii. ld marshal, the Grand Duke Nicholas, Tims was a merited acknowledgement by the czar of the great service his sou land ren-tublished. dered in the Turkish campaign. For some time after his elevation to the throne Alexander III seldom appeared in public, but lived in the closest retirement at Satschina, being in constant dread of the nihilists. Immediately personal are, however, the attempts upon his life by the nihilists. "It is really very hard," he sald on being designated heir apparent by the dying Nicholas, "that out of the whole vast Russlan nation I should be selected by destiny to be ezar."

The phrase was no empty affectation of modesty. The burden of terrible anxiety that must daily and hourly be borne by the wearer of the Russian crown might well appall the most eager aspirant for Imperial honors. When the duty devolved upon him the emperor threw himself honestly and courngeously into the task of ruling his mighty empire, but he was summoned to the throne by dynamite, and he lived and relgned in the constant shadow of the fate which overtook his Nihilist Attempts on Ills Life.

People did not speak about it, but the shadow was there, and the emperor knew it. But he went about his dally work cheerful and nuperturbed. When in 1887 the nihilist attempt of March 13 came within a hair's breadth of success, the emperor displayed the most absolute selfcommand. The whole imperial family were to have been blown up on their way to the fortress of Str. Peter and Paul when they went to the services in commemora tion of the death of Alexander II.

It was at the station that the emperor was informed that he had escaped by the skin of his teeth from a catastrophe similar to that which destroyed his father. He went down to the palace of Gatschina with lds wife and children, laughing and talking in the carriage as if nothing had for the palace and the emperor and his wife were driven alone through the park did he brenk the news to the empress. She broke down utterly and wept. Not so her husband. "I am rendy," he said simply. "I will do my duty at any cost." But as the ezur, and not the man, he The police had caught six nihlists with which the imperial family passed. The next serious plot the world heard of was that unearthed on the exar's visit to the Don Cossack country later in the same year. It had been planned by the conspirators to blow up the entire imperial family on its arrival at Novotcherkask, the chief town of the Don Cossack region. For this conspiracy, which failed because of the vigilance of the police, eight conspirators were hanged in St. Petersburg ou Jun. 2, 1882.

Accident in Transcaucasia.

On Oct. 20, 1888, the czar and czarina escaped denth as if by a miracle in a rail road aecident in Transcancasia. The train containing the czar and czarina and snite left Taranovka at noon on that day. While passing through a deep gorge near Borki the train left the rails. At the time of the accident the czar and czarina were in the saloon carriage at breakfast. When the first earriage left the track the rest of the train oscillated, and the succeeding carrlage hecled over. The saloon carriage, ulthough remaining on the track, was badly shattered. The roof fell in, but rested on a portion of the side, thus formlng a shield for the occupants.

It seems incredible that with such havoc any of the occupants of the train should have escaped unhart. As it was, 20 people were killed and 18 wounded. Among the latter were the royal counte, who werboth slightly injured. The accident was officially attributed to a defective track. but the general belief was that it was due to the nihillsts. It was complained that Count Alensikoff, director of the Cancasus rallways, had neglected to take the usual precantious, and was responsible for the mishiquthat befell the train. The report that nihilists had wrecked the train, and that unless he had been in connevance with pened, so preyed upon the count's mind that he committed suicide.

The conspiracy came to light in Kiev in December, 1892. Flfty one conspirators were arrested, most of whom were of aris tocratic birth, and a whole cellar full of explosives, together with marked plans of gentleman pronounced the youth a conthe winter palace, showing where the bombs should be fired, were found. Many army offleers were suspected of complicity in this piot, but nothing incrinduatues could be proved against them. In December, 1893, it was reported that an attemp: had been made to polson the czar, and that food taken from his table at the su; per given on the 12th anniversary of the founding of the imperial order of St. George, had when eaten by the children in St. Nicholas orphan asylum, made them very sick. A Good and Kind Husband.

Although stern and even overbraring to the majority of those who surround him, Alexander III was always a sympathizing und affectionate hasband and father. His children are none of them very strong, and he has always been most tender in his treatment of them. The czarewitch Nicho las was born in 1868, Grand Dake George in 1871, Grand Duchess Xenia in 1875, Grand Duke Michael in 1878, and Grand Duchess Olga, his favorite, in 1882. When at his palace at Gateshina he lunched dally at 1 o'clock, with his wife and chil dren, and to this meal none but the closest lutimates of his family were ever admit ted. After luncheon, if there were no further deputations to receive or important business to attend to, the czar went walking or driving in company with the empress or his sons. In the evening there was often a little music, of which the empress is as fond as the emperor, and her majesty is a good planist. The czar retired to bed early, and by 11 o'clock all was silence in the imperial apartments. During the daytime the empress occupied a room on the ground floor, exactly below the czar's study, with which it communicates directly by a small private staircase.

Alexander III was a great, strong man before the influenza attacked him in 1889. Since then he has never been thoroughly well. He was six feet high, and was deep chested and broad-shouldered. His little gray eyes resembled those of his mother's his father, the late emperor's, who had dark blue eyes (such as the French call blue black), which are to be seen in the pictures of Alexander I, Paul and Peter the Great. In figure and style he was also like his uncle, the late Grand Dake of Hesse-Darmstadt. The shape of his head, which was above the average size, like most of his family, was rather peculiar. Ills forelead was high. A small mouth, with extremely good teeth, which he only showed when he laughed, was his best feature. In St. Perershurg he was always nttired in uniform, but when on a holiday he wore a black and white shepherd's plaid, such a favorite with English noblemen, a black tie, white hat, but no gloves.

Preserving Peace lu Europe.

Of recent years the czar has played an important part in preserving the pence of Europe. To maintain his pacific policy he visited Germany in 1889, arriving on Oct. 10 at Klel and proceeding to Berlin the next day, where he was received with the ntmost show of cordiality by the kulser, the two monarchs embracing when they met. Emperor William returned the visit In August, 1890, and he was received with the same cordiality in Russia that he had extended to Alexander In Germany. These expressions of friendliness on the part of the czar had not, however, overcome his old dislike to the Germans, for in 1891 Russla entered into negotiations for an ulliance with France that was cemented in was the absolute head and which he, by plets that have kept the czar in constant | July of that year by the visit of the French | been invited fleet to Cropstadt, and culminated an a defensive alliance with France in November of that year.

A further expression of the close sympathy of the two motions occurred in Octoher, 1893, when the Russlap light visited France, to be received with saco exaggerated enthusiasm - It was during these celebrations that on Oct. 28 the late President Carnot hands the landons tonst at Toulan, saying. I drink to the friendship of two great nations, and through them the peace of the world." Despite its friendship for France Russia was forced late a commer c nl treaty with Germany n March of last year, Emperor William baying intimated that unless such sa agreement were reached only war could follow

Born in 1868, he developed so slowly and showed so few mental gifts that his parents called in a specialist to pronounce upon his health. This scientifle genial idiot, and was nearly killed for his frankness by the irascible czar, who gave him a swinging box on the car.

But the young prince, if very far from being a genins, is certainly no fool. He has the weedy physique of his mother, is very sallow and has extraordinary expressionless, bluish-gray eyes, the bushy black eyebrows over which do not improve his appearance. He has lately grown a beard, which has given him a more manly aspect and made him look like the cousin he is of the Dake of York, but it is an ugly likeness. There is the square Tartar head and the curious Tartar snub nose, which pronounces him a Russian.

What kind of an emperor Nicholas Alexandrovitch will make it is difficult to tell; still, there is no reason to believe that while he will be quite as peace-loving as his father, he will be less inclined to play a great diplomatic part in Europe. He is more likely to resemble his great-uncle, Alexander I, and while nnxious to introduce liberal institutions into his country, may probably succumb eventually to the councils of self-seeking courtiers. Still, he may have surprises in store for us and do something great. It is always the unexpected that happens, and he is still too young-only 26—to have definitely formed his char-

Turner received 37 votes, L. F. Garrard 21 and Patrick Walsh 9 votes for the leng term. The nomination of Major Baeon was then made unanimous.

The contest has been a very heated one, and the candidates have been on the stump for the past few months. Of the four candidates, Bacon, Walsh and Garrard are recognized as silver men, and Turner represented the attitude of relations at Hesse-Darmstadt more than the administration on the financial question. The election will take place next Tuesday, but yesterday's eaucus settles the matter.

The Remarkable Operation of a London Surgeon on a Noseless Man.

The achievements of American surgeons in bold and extraordinary operations have long been the wonder of the world, but now from the other side of the Atlantic comes a story which shows that the old country is waking up a bit in the art of engrafting living human flesh. A young man has put his finger to his noso, and it remains there permanently.

A few months ago a youth, whose nasal organ was missing as the result of an accident, called at Charing Cross hospital, London, with the request that the surgeons would supply the deficiency, artificially or otherwise. He expressed himself as willing to undergo any sort of treatment by which his disfigured face might be made fairly presentable and not absolutely repulsive to his best Sunday summer girl. Mr. Bloxam, tho senior surgoon, took tho interesting easo in hand. First the amputated finger of another patient was earved and fashioned to the semblance of a nose and then securely grafted on the face. But it was found that this mutilated digital appendage had not survived its cutting up. It was "dead" and failed to take fresh

The nosoless man, nothing daunted, thereupon agreed to the surgeon's suggestion that one of his own (the patient's) fingers should be eut off to furnish a nasal organ, but in order that the finger should not be wasted in the event of this operation being unsuccessful it was only half amputated. The patient's arm being incased in plaster, for four weeks he held his own live finger to his face in the hope of its taking root. This it did. The portion which was still attached to his hand was then out through and soon joined the rest in adhoring firmly to the face. Although minus a finger, the young man now has a new nose of his own flosh and blood.

The transferred cartilage has been so manipulated by clever Dr. Bloxam that its original identity is entiroly lost, and the further process of shaping it is now being proceeded with. - New York

cate them in the art, and they will reach out for the world. Speaking of a good authority on this subject, the Spokano Chronicle says:

"John Brisben Walker, editor of The Cosmopolitan, who for a time served in the Chinese army, holds that the powers of the world should try to stop the war between China and Japan. He argues that if this war lasts long enough to convince China that she must modernize her military system it will not be long before the yellow dragon will be the most formidable battle ensign on the earth. All of which coincides with the remark of Napoleon that it would be an evil day when the Chinese learned the art of war."

CLOSING RANKS.

The Democrats of Minerva and Mayslick All in Line.

The Meetings Last Night the Largest Ever Held at Those Points

The campaign in the Mayslick precincts ended last night with the largest and most enthuslastic meeting ever held in the county, outside of Maysville. Long before night the townswas crowded, many coming from Fleming, Robertson and Nicholas. The "Fair View" Band furnished oxcellent music. The Demoerats were jubilant. The large double school house did not hold half the crowd and the yard was filled with many eager voters, who could not get near enough to hear the speakers. Mr. Georgo W. Sulser made the first address and his speech was a telling one, and was well received. Hon. Jno. F. Hager, of Ashland, came next and the audience went wild, as he poured hot shot into the Republicans and revealed the many sins of the G. O. P. and its dark-lantern annex, the A. P. A. The speaker dealt in solid facts and his exposition of the workings of the steel and sugar trusts convinced every one that the tariff was not only a tax but legalized robbery. Judgo G. S. Wall came next and his old neighbors and friends gave him a rousing reception. He drew a clear cut and able comparison of the mission of the two great parties, showing that Democracy embraced all religions and all peoples, whilst Republicanism embraced no religion and no people, but was the ereature of sectionalism and the ereator of trusts. His remarks as to the county and local ticket met a hearty response.!

As the audience was about to disperse loud calls of "Slattery" were heard and Mr. Tom Slattery ably responded in a fow well chosen remarks.

The Democrats of Minerva closed ington this week. their campaign last night with the largest and most enthuslastic political meeting ever held in that village. The little town was ablazo with fancy lanters and decorations and everybody present had a grand time, and were well entertained with rousing speeches from the eloquent Hon. Bee Lee Hardin, A. O. is the "Standing on End" Sensation a Real or an Imaginary One?

As a general rule unscientific opinions on a scientific subject are of but little value to the student and the investigator. Yet to be permitted to ask such questions appears to relieve one to a certain extent, even though the answer be far from satisfactory.

There is a variety of opinions among the anthorities concerning the subject of the hair "standing on end" in time of extreme fright, some of which are tenable and altogether probable, others ridiculous in the extreme. The notion, if notion it be, that the hair occasionally raises and lifts the hat is of extreme antiquity. In the oldest book in the Bible (Job iv, 14-15) I find the following: 'Fear came upon me and trembling, which made all my bones to shake. Then a spirit passed before my face. The hair of my flesh stood up.'

Do you remember what Virgil says about his hero in the celebrated vox faucibns lieeset passage? I read from Conington's translation:

While thus in agony I pressed From house to house the endless quest, The pale, sad specier of my wife Confronts me larger than in life. I stood appalled, my halr erect, And fear my tongue tied ntterances

Maebeth relates his experience as fol

Why do I yield to that suggestion Whose herrid image doth unfix my hair? And again in Hamlet we read:

could a talo unfold whose lightest words Would harrow up thy soul, freeze thy young Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their spheres,

Thy knotted and combined locks to part And each particular halr to stand on end,

Like quills npon the fretful porcupine. Similar instances of "hair raising" being mentioned in literature could be multiplied, but the above are sufficient, even without scientific corroboration, to provo that the phenomenon is not a freak of the imagination.

One of the authorities before me gives this opinion: "Plainly stated, the hair raising notion is without a substantial basis. In short, the sensation is only an imaginary one."

Hildreth says, "In such cases the hair actually stands erect, a result of a sudden contraction of the follieles."

Wilson's "Normal Condition of the Hair and Skin' says, 'The phenomena of hair standing erect in eases of extreme terror cannot satisfactorily be explained."-St. Louis Republie.
